FOX FUNNIES and CROW CALLS

Mama had learned never to be surprised any more by what she found in her little son's pockets before she threw his clothes into the washing machine. But this time, when she removed a wad of grass, she was curious enough to ask him why he had put it there.

"Gee whiz, Ma," the boy replied. "That worm in there had to eat, didn't he?"

The stationery owner noticed 11-year-old Willie thumbing through a stack of greeting cards for a long time. "Maybe I can help you. What are you looking for, sonny—a birthday card, congratulations to your Mom and Pop on their wedding anniversary, a message to a sick relative or friend?" he asked.

Little Willie looked up at the man and shook his head. "Have you got anything," he asked with a hopeful sigh, "in blank report cards?"

The scene is the African veldt. Two explorers meet each other and exchange introductions.

1st Explorer: "I ran away to this jungle wilderness to learn how to live with nature, to commune with my own spirit, to get closer to the truth of life. What about you, sir? Why did you escape from civilization?"

2nd Explorer: "Because my young son has begun saxophone lessons!"

"The best way to make a fire with sticks," advised one Cub Scout to another, "is to be sure one of them is a match!"

Dad came home unexpectedly early one afternoon from his office to hear the mother of his four active children romping with them in the living room. They were playing "Cops and Robbers," and as one of the boys aimed his toy gun at her and shouted, "Bang! You're dead!" Mom sagged to the floor where she lay in a heap. When she didn't rise in a few minutes, Dad hurried over and kneeled at her side.

"Honey, you all right?" he asked.

"Shhh!" she said, opening one wary eye. "Just let me play dead. It's the only way I can get any rest."

Junior looked forward to going fishing with his father, but he was disappointed after his father drew in half a dozen catches and he got barely a nibble. In disgust, finally, he reeled in his line and turned to his Pop. "Will you please put another worm on my hook?" he asked.

"But there's nothing wrong with the bait you have on your line now," his father said.

"There sure is," retorted Junior, pointing to the worm. "It isn't trying!"

Definition of a sweater: A garment worn by a child when his mother feels cold.

One kangaroo mother to another on a rainy day: "I dread these days when the youngsters can't play outside!"

Eight-year-old Elaine came home from school filled with excitement because she'd been voted "the smartest girl in the class." But she bubbled with even more excitement when she returned home the following week with news that she'd been voted "the best-dressed pupil." Yet her victory in a contest the third week left her subdued and slightly saddened.

"What happened?" her mother asked. "What were you voted this time to upset you so much?"

"The most stuck-up girl in the class," Elaine said.

This Indian appeared in court one day to have his name shortened legally. "What's your name now?" asked the judge.

"Chief Many Train-Whistles," replied the Indian.

"And what do you want to shorten it to?"

The Indian folded his arms, took a statuesque stance, and grunted, "Toots!"
